Clarification of News Report

We write with respect to the attached news article entitled "DICT says no delay on Mislattel rollout" posted in philstar.com on March 15, 2019. The article reported in part that:

"The Mislattel consortium, the country's incoming third telecommunications player, has commenced preparatory works on its network despite pending decision on its franchise, according to Information and Communications Technology acting Secretary Eliseo Rio.

'Mislattel is already doing things. They have started with their rollout. They are already building towers and doing their layout. They are taking the risk, but they cannot not operate until they get the Certificate of Public Convenience and Necessity and frequencies,' Rio said.

The National Telecommunications Commission (NTC) and the DICT are still unable to award Mislattel its CPCN and the frequencies as there remains no finality on the Congress resolution involving its franchise.

With the delay in the resolution of its franchise, Mislattel's planned start of commercial operations has been moved further to early 2021 from the initial expected commencement date of late 2020, under the consideration that its CPCN will be awarded by March.

We would like to state that the timetable for roll-out is still late 2020.
